

CHAPTER I.

Mr. Q. R. Enterprise, of Harlem, is competing for the World's $200 "Want" prize. He thinks he has a good chance to win.

CHAPTER II.

An avicious Goat, who has also heard of the World's offer, thinks that he'll take a chance, too, at the $200 prize.

THIS ADVERTISEMENT is designed to impress upon your mind the fact that THE NEW YORK WORLD charges HALF RATES ONLY for "SITUATIONS WANTED" and "HELP WANTED" "WANTS" on MONDAYS and SATURDAYS - Special Situation Days.

All "Situations Wanted" only 5c. per line, all "Help Wanted" only 10c. per line, on these two days.

PRIZES FOR World "Want" Advertisers.

$200 Will be given to THE WORLD to the advertiser who during May receives the largest number of legitimate answers to one three-line "Want."

$100 Will be given to the man or woman who secures the best situation through "The World's" "Want" during May.

THE ABOVE PRIZES WILL BE AWARDED BY A COMMITTEE OF PROMINENT "WORLD" ADVERTISERS.

LAST EDITION
ROBBED OF FULLY $50,000.

Turf Publisher John H. Wallace a Victim of Misplaced Confidence.

Fortunes are at stake.

Which Will Win the Great Brooklyn Handicap To-Morrow?

Latest Tips from Fast Trials of Some of the Favorites.

FOREIGN NEWS BY CABLE.

$300,000 IN BONDS GONE.

"I WILL STAY," SAYS MURRAY

BANISHED FROM ROME.

COUNTY DEMOCRACY

PELL'S PEERS HARD TO FIND. JEROME TALKS OUT IN COURT.

Slow Worker Getting a Jury to Try the Bank-Wrecking Broker.

Renounces Political Ambition to Speak His Mind on Barker's Trial.

LAST EDITION
ARREST OF A UNION LEAGUER.

Clubman Musgrave Charged with a Serious Offense.

Accused of Sending Indecent Matter Through the Mail.

Leslie E. MacLeod, a well-known turf writer, is under arrest at Police Headquarters, suspected of complicity in robbing John H. Wallace, editor of Wallace's Monthly, Wallace's American Trotting Register, and Wallace's Year Book, of some $50,000.

He was brought down to the Tombs this morning and remanded until to-morrow.

Extraordinary interest is manifested in the great Brooklyn handicap, to be run to-morrow.

For weeks the merits of the horses entered have been carefully canvassed, and the realization or destruction of hopes built on the result is awaited with anxiety by thousands.

The bottom facts with regard to the recent failure of the banking house of George K. Sistrer & Co. are just beginning to come out, and the disclosures made within the last twenty-four hours confirm the suspicion that have existed in Wall Street ever since the failure—that the collapse was not entirely due to the embezzlement of Douglas H. Sistrer, the dead Philadelphia partner.

CATILINE MURRAY—"I go, but I return."

PELL'S PEERS HARD TO FIND. JEROME TALKS OUT IN COURT.

Witnesses for McGowan.

The Alleged Blackmailing Policeman Makes a Good Defense.

There he learned that Bob had left the house, and that he was going to Boston on business for his uncle.

Mr. Wallace knew that he had no business in Boston, and fled with a vague alarm, and returned to his office in the Standard Building, and almost immediately began an examination of the Treasurer's books and also of those of the bookkeeper.

Mr. Wallace was a man of over sixty years of age. His father and the father of the boy who had left him now live on the verge of ruin, were second cousins.

Young Wallace's parents live in Pittsburgh, and his mother is a bachelor.

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

George Hamilton Pell, the robust and handsome financier, was accompanied by his wife and daughter as he faced Recorder Smyth in Part III. of the Court of General Sessions to-day.

Six jurors were not by dint of hard work, the prosecution seven times preemptorily challenging jurors who had qualified for the box according to law, and the defense exercising the same right of preemptory challenge against five citizens.

Policeman Francis H. McGowan, of the steamer Taitel, was on trial to-day before Commissioner MacLean, charged with extorting blackmail.

Emil Roth, a saloon-keeper on East Houston street, complained that McGowan, in citizen's clothes, entered his saloon Easter Sunday, showed his badge and demanded $25 to avoid an arrest. Roth compromised for $5.

Mr. Wallace was a man of over sixty years of age. His father and the father of the boy who had left him now live on the verge of ruin, were second cousins.

Young Wallace's parents live in Pittsburgh, and his mother is a bachelor.

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

George Hamilton Pell, the robust and handsome financier, was accompanied by his wife and daughter as he faced Recorder Smyth in Part III. of the Court of General Sessions to-day.

Six jurors were not by dint of hard work, the prosecution seven times preemptorily challenging jurors who had qualified for the box according to law, and the defense exercising the same right of preemptory challenge against five citizens.

Policeman Francis H. McGowan, of the steamer Taitel, was on trial to-day before Commissioner MacLean, charged with extorting blackmail.

Emil Roth, a saloon-keeper on East Houston street, complained that McGowan, in citizen's clothes, entered his saloon Easter Sunday, showed his badge and demanded $25 to avoid an arrest. Roth compromised for $5.

Mr. Wallace was a man of over sixty years of age. His father and the father of the boy who had left him now live on the verge of ruin, were second cousins.

Young Wallace's parents live in Pittsburgh, and his mother is a bachelor.

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

George Hamilton Pell, the robust and handsome financier, was accompanied by his wife and daughter as he faced Recorder Smyth in Part III. of the Court of General Sessions to-day.

Six jurors were not by dint of hard work, the prosecution seven times preemptorily challenging jurors who had qualified for the box according to law, and the defense exercising the same right of preemptory challenge against five citizens.

Policeman Francis H. McGowan, of the steamer Taitel, was on trial to-day before Commissioner MacLean, charged with extorting blackmail.

Emil Roth, a saloon-keeper on East Houston street, complained that McGowan, in citizen's clothes, entered his saloon Easter Sunday, showed his badge and demanded $25 to avoid an arrest. Roth compromised for $5.

Mr. Wallace was a man of over sixty years of age. His father and the father of the boy who had left him now live on the verge of ruin, were second cousins.

Young Wallace's parents live in Pittsburgh, and his mother is a bachelor.

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

Mr. Sistrer & Co. were a banking house of some $300,000 in assets, and they were the largest creditors of the firm in New York City.

A remarkable story is told by the representative of the law firm of Alexander & Heckscher in this city. He said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

George Hamilton Pell, the robust and handsome financier, was accompanied by his wife and daughter as he faced Recorder Smyth in Part III. of the Court of General Sessions to-day.

Six jurors were not by dint of hard work, the prosecution seven times preemptorily challenging jurors who had qualified for the box according to law, and the defense exercising the same right of preemptory challenge against five citizens.

Policeman Francis H. McGowan, of the steamer Taitel, was on trial to-day before Commissioner MacLean, charged with extorting blackmail.

Emil Roth, a saloon-keeper on East Houston street, complained that McGowan, in citizen's clothes, entered his saloon Easter Sunday, showed his badge and demanded $25 to avoid an arrest. Roth compromised for $5.